Pope Rakes Fascist Disorder

Norman Baker

(HIMSELF)

BAD LUCK—law will go astray sometimes—James L. Dye of St. Louis, Mo., committed a robbery in 1925—supreme court annulled his appeal and the court officials forgot to notify St. Louis officials—he was never jailed—a new attaché found the unfinished document—James' arrest followed and now he is serving his time AFTER FIVE YEARS OF FREEDOM—better late than never.

BURIED TWICE—no joke—at least Pierre Kaemmerlin of N. Y. City thinks so—he is a wealthy broker—the Mrs says he left her to marry the daughter of a wealthy Chicago family—girl friends of Mrs. Kaemmerlin advised Pierre on two different occasions that his former wife was dead—he paid the bills twice—now his former Mrs. is suing for alimony of $50 per week—SHE SEEMS BOUND TO GET HIM one way or another.

CLEVER—Jess Reed and Fay Campbell were arrested for booze selling—were locked up in the jail at Melbourne, W. Va.—they stripped themselves of ALL CLOTHING—were themselves thick with case—dressed through a small hole in prison wall—and now they would have been sent to the workhouse—were smart or could not make mistakes while we are making dimes—that will change some day, and they will wish they had saved their EASY MONEY.

AN OUTRAGE—a small church stood in Nashville, Tenn.—a church for colored folks—T. Clay Moore was the owner—it disappeared over night—Clay wanted to find it—went to police headquarters—could do nothing—no one admitted it but all the neighbors' yards were filled with good kindling wood—some people say that a—etc. about a cornfield—remember that song—just can't beat the colored folks.

MEETING TONIGHT—hundreds of farmers expected tonight at 8 o'clock at Buckhorn Church, on route 117 out of Maquoketa, Iowa.—come along—we are all going—glad to see any of our friends up there—even our friendly editor of their daily may be there—everybody—LET'S GO—come on you Bureau, Grange, Union and Protective Farmers it will interest you.

ITALY is quarreling again—they will soon settle it—one thing about Italy—they settle their own affairs and do not bring other nations into it as a rule.

BIRTH CONTROL—the churches are endorsing it—WHY NOT—other nations have recognized it—it is like everything else—has its good and bad points—anything OVERDONE is bad.

ACCIDENTAL—they say of Danny Hoxsey's death—I DON'T BELIEVE IT—however, that is merely one person's thots. A good stiff third degree would perhaps have shaken out more evidence.

EGGS BEAT MAYOR—Mat Wagner of Winona, Minn.—ran for mayor and conducted a successful campaign—during the running he sold eggs for ONE CENT A DOZEN—the market price was 16c—he has been removed from office on a charge of violating the CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT—some act—can't even help the poor folks these days without being arrested—reminds me of the organized medical gang—who will be mayor now?

DEVIL OF A TIME DISTINGUISHING—everybody has the same name—not all—but ONE-THIRD of a city's population of 1,000 is named DRAGE—over 300 of them by that name—surely is COMMON there but uncommon here—the city is Bozart, England.—this refers to surnames.

KIRKLAND BACK IN VALPARAISO

Sentence Is to Be Reconsidered by Judge in Indiana

VALPARAISO, Ind.—(INS)—Virtually Kirkland was in jail here today awaiting arraignment Friday before Judge Grant Crumpacker, who is re-considering a 10-year term for the youth for his part in the death of Arlene Draves, his schoolgirl sweetheart.

It was likely that Kirkland would be called before Judge Crumpacker sometime today for scheduling of a hearing to reconsider his sentence. Kirkland was brought here yesterday from Pendleton, where he had started serving his original sentence. He knew nothing of the new developments in his case and questioned sheriff Burney Maxwell as to the reason for his being returned to Valparaiso.

The state contends the Judge erred in setting the one to ten year sentence upon Kirkland, asking that the punishment be raised to from five to 21 years in prison.

Prosecutor Robert Estill, who raised the question of sentence, acknowledged today that the issue "looks more complicated than at first."

They were: Clay Rubble, 7; Eva Rubble, 5, and George Rubble, 4, all children of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Rubble, who live on a farm near New Alexandria, Pa.

Minneapolis Grain Pit Thrown Into Turmoil by Farm Board

MINNEAPOLIS.—(INS)—The Minneapolis wheat market was demoralized today when the grain stabilization corporation, federal farm board agency, withdrew all support from both the cash and futures market. The result was that June futures plummeted 13 1/2 cents in a little more than an hour, touching a low of 63 cents. Trading at noon was around 65 cents. The reason for this withdrawal, affecting all markets in the country, was that the new crop has become a factor on the market. George S. Milnor, president of the stabilization corporation, who was in Minneapolis, asserted. "The only statement we have made concerning our policy was that we would continue buying until the new wheat crop became a market factor," he said. "Yesterday we sold new wheat delivered at the Gulf. That means that the new wheat now is a market factor. So today we are not buying."

TEXAS GUINAN READY TO SAIL FOR NEW YORK

Hostess of Night Club Says She Will Return Home

LE HAVRE, France.—(INS)—"I'm going back to New York where people are still human, where there should be of interest to every citizen of Muscatine, and especially to those who own property and are interested in the growth of the city. This article should be especially interesting to automobile dealers as well as to restaurant and hotel owners."

One year ago last Saturday was Memorial day again—there is no news in that statement. But one year ago on Memorial day Norman Baker drew over 50,000 people into Muscatine. There were so many people here that they could not find room for even a small number of them on the K-TNT hill, and it was necessary to broadcast the entire program from West park. Well, the people of Muscatine, remember that crowd! The largest ever assembled in the city of Muscatine—the greatest number of automobiles ever assembled—the greatest gallons in gasoline and oil ever sold in Muscatine—the greatest gross receipts at eating places and hotels ever recorded in Muscatine—and those barges kept open to do automobile repair work were very busy—and that day showed the greatest concession sales ever made in Muscatine.

For all of that, they owe credit to Station K-TNT, the very station that the media and the Muscatine Journal have tried so hard to close through having its license revoked, thus robbing, or attempting to rob, Muscatine of the best advertising it ever has had or ever will have.

In addition to that in order to serve the city and the thousands of people who come here every year, hundreds of thousands of dollars, and in fact, over a million dollars yearly which has been brought into Muscatine by the Norman Baker enterprises, including this paper, in which he is also interested, we need only ask our good citizens to recall the Decoration day crowd of a year ago, in comparison with the crowd which was in Muscatine last Saturday. We feel safe in saying that 250 people would cover practically all the strangers in the city, that day. Who lost? Mr. Baker wanted to make the fast and refrain from making a Memorial day address, which is his usual custom, for no other reason than to show the people of Muscatine what enterprises in the city was bringing most of the crowds.

Restaurant men, hotel men, garagemen, oil station owners, refreshment stand owners and numerous others soon saw and felt the DIFFERENCE.

There is no time like the present, for the people of Muscatine to show their reciprocity for the good that has been done this city by K-TNT and Norman Baker—not because he is a stockholder in this paper do we say this, but for reasons that no city can progress without having crowds come to it and spend money in it. If Norman Baker continues, on just the holidays alone, for the balance of this year, or the Sundays, not featuring special things as he has for years past, Muscatine business people as well as all citizens, will be robbed of hundreds of thousands of dollars that would otherwise be spent here.

Baker, Free Press Managing Editor, To Give Up Post

R. R. Baker, for the last five months managing editor of the Midwest Free Press, Saturday will sever his connections with this paper, he was succeeded by W. D. Randall, member of the legal staff of Norman Baker and former newspaper man.

Mr. Baker plans a vacation in Wisconsin, after which he will go east to join former associates in newspaper work. During his employment on the Free Press Mr. Baker has established quite a reputation because of his fearless and illuminating editorials. Mrs. Baker and a daughter, Betty Ann, left the city two weeks ago to visit with relatives before joining Mr. Baker in the east. The Bakers lived at 200 1/2 Ash street, and made many friends while in Muscatine.

Swarms of Strange Insects Arrive to Pester People Here

Swarms of small insects, similar to a gnat, that descended upon Muscatine several days ago, today were said to be a pest to many people to add to the general discomfort of warm weather.

The large "flies" are strange to these parts, and no one can give a name to them. Carl Rylander, county farm agent, is equally in the dark as to their identity. While not as large as the Buffalo flies that come up from the river, the new arrivals appear as plentiful during the day as at night. They have not been known to bite, but prove pests in getting down the neck or up the sleeves.

Two Women Dead In Crossing Crash

TOULON, Ill.—(INS)—Falling to head the approach of the gas-electric train on a branch line of the C. & Q. three miles south of Toulon, Mrs. W. B. Ballentine and Mrs. Dora Muckey were dead Wednesday. Their large sedan was dragged 150 yards.

DES MOINES.—One hundred fifteen Iowa legionnaires, representatives of every American Legion Post in the seventh district, Wednesday had honored Andrew G. Cumpe, past commander of the seventh district, Maurice Cahill of Cedar Rapids was the principal speaker at the honor banquet last night.

Muscatine-Journal-Baker

This is an unusual heading for an editorial, but the subject is well worth bringing to the attention of the citizens of Muscatine.

There has been so much controversy regarding Norman Baker and his enterprises—especially Radio Station K-TNT—that many people do not know just what to believe. They constantly read the attacks of the Muscatine Journal against Mr. Baker and K-TNT, as well as the attacks of the media in their attempts to close Station K-TNT, then they read some things in the Midwest Free Press about it all. For the benefit of those who believe it to be a lopsided affair, and for those who wish to know the truth, we believe we are able in this article to point out a few things which should be of interest to every citizen of Muscatine, and especially to those who own property and are interested in the growth of the city. This article should be especially interesting to automobile dealers as well as to restaurant and hotel owners.

One year ago last Saturday was Memorial day again—there is no news in that statement. But one year ago on Memorial day Norman Baker drew over 50,000 people into Muscatine. There were so many people here that they could not find room for even a small number of them on the K-TNT hill, and it was necessary to broadcast the entire program from West park. Well, the people of Muscatine, remember that crowd! The largest ever assembled in the city of Muscatine—the greatest number of automobiles ever assembled—the greatest gallons in gasoline and oil ever sold in Muscatine—the greatest gross receipts at eating places and hotels ever recorded in Muscatine—and those barges kept open to do automobile repair work were very busy—and that day showed the greatest concession sales ever made in Muscatine.

For all of that, they owe credit to Station K-TNT, the very station that the media and the Muscatine Journal have tried so hard to close through having its license revoked, thus robbing, or attempting to rob, Muscatine of the best advertising it ever has had or ever will have.

BANDITS STILL ARE AT LARGE

Robbers Set Fire to Filling Station and Loot Bank

BRAYTON, Ia.—(INS)—No trace has been found today of the bandits who yesterday perpetrated a robbery of the most sagely planned robberies in the history of the state.

It is believed that fire which broke out in the Hoegh oil station here yesterday shortly before the Brayton Savings bank was robbed of all available cash, about $900, was set by the same bandits who robbed the bank.

The oil station, containing 20 barrels of oil, burned fiercely, attracting the entire population of the town, including the bank force. While F. Miller, cashier, and Einar Miller, assistant cashier, watched the fire from the walk in front of the bank, unseen bandits entered the bank by a rear door and ransacked it.

AVERS ACTION IS AFFRONT TO HOLY PONTIFF

Evidence of Serious Nature of Trouble Given in Reports

ROME.—(INS)—Many "important members" of Catholic youth people's organizations have been detained and questioned by the fascist authorities as part of the move to dissolve all such societies, it was revealed in an official statement issued from the Vatican this evening.

Among those questioned, though not revealed, was Signor Borsone, honorary president of the Catholic Youth society, who received an "admonition" from the police to refrain from all political action.

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL.

ROME.—(INS)—Vigorous condemnation of the attacks by fascist demonstrators against Catholic institutions in Italy was voiced by Pope Pius XI. Today in bidding farewell to a group of missionaries who had been visiting Rome.

"They said everything passed without incident," his Holiness remarked, apparently referring to the fascist version of the disorders.

"This is a very precious sentence, considering the various incidents of destruction and vandalism throughout Italy, even in Rome itself—even in buildings enjoying extraterritorial rights—which is an affront to the person of the Holy Pontiff."

His Holiness declared that the dissolution of Catholic clubs by the fascist authorities was in violation of paragraph forty-three of the Lateran concordat between church and state and was an action "dangerous to society and the country."

State Controls Juveniles

"Juvenile associations, the Pontiff declared, 'are now directly dependent upon the directions of the state.

"No human regime and no government can guarantee spiritual life, which only the church can give. The dissolution is a violation of our sacred right to the welfare of and lead young souls.

"The recent happenings form no surprise for us. Some will remember that during the celebrations over signing of the concordat we said: 'Now we have peace of heart, but undoubtedly crucifying will follow.'

"The devil could not remain quiet in the midst of so much happiness. But the devil is not to be feared, and that is some sign we are on the right path."

HOPE RETURNS FOR CHICAGO UNDER CERMAK

New Mayor Brings a New Confidence to Windy City

CHICAGO, Ill.—(Special)—Only a short time has elapsed since a former Illinois mine boy gasped the administrative helm of Chicago, but already he has succeeded in bringing this city a feeling of relief and confidence.

Anton J. Cermak, who as an apprentice miner was fired for seeking an increase in wages, has lost no time in demonstrating that he is going to be a different sort of mayor than his predecessor, the blustering William Hale Thompson. Bold strokes that he has taken in the few weeks that he has been in office have successfully opened the task of lifting the Illinois metropolis from the slough of inefficient government and corrupt politics.

Mayor Cermak has begun to change Chicago into order, to give direction to the civic and government program of Chicago—which fundamentally remains the pulsating, go-getting city it always has been.

Departments Given Life
Step by step "Tony," as the new executive is familiarly known, is revitalizing the various departments of the city government. The police department, the fire department, the city's schools and the kind of education provided for the 500,000 children attending them—all have come under the careful scrutiny of Cermak, with important changes resulting.

And, above all, he is showing a personal interest in the lives and affairs of the city's army of workers, encouraging them to be loyal and confident. For instance, when two policemen were shot down on a busy street corner recently he took an active part in questioning the captured slayer and was highly instrumental in wringing a confession from him.

Later he took time from his busy schedule of activities to attend the funeral of the two victims. He also caused to be held for her a funeral for a woman who had done rescue work in a tunnel disaster that took 12 lives recently in Chicago.

Good Example is Set
A good example of what is to be expected from the new mayor is set by the mayor himself. While the manifold duties of his office make it impossible for him to observe time-clock regularity, he has been seen entering his office as early as 7 a. m., and leaving as late as 9 p. m.

Signs of the new order in Chicago's government are apparent in the mayor's office, where many changes have taken place. The boisterous "half-fell-well-met" attitude of the Thompson administration has given way to one of business-like efficiency. There is more activity, more enthusiasm, and more loyalty.

Economy Moves Applauded
Cermak himself has a cordial greeting for all his visitors, but he insists upon them coming to the point and stating the matter at hand as expeditiously as possible in order to enable him to turn his attention to the multiplicity of other subjects awaiting his attention.

Particularly noteworthy moves instituted by the new mayor have won the enthusiasm of the city's taxpayers. A reduction of taxes already is in prospect. He is also being applauded for his efforts toward consolidating the overlapping bodies in the city's archaic structure of government, the results of which would be lowered costs and increased efficiency.

Abundance of Snakes this Year Along Cedar River, Farmers Say

WEST LIBERTY, Ia.—(Special)—Snakes, especially the bull and the ringed snake, are to be found along the Cedar river in abundance this year, according to the farmers.

Contrary to the custom in former years, the farmers are not harming the snakes, for they are regarded by the majority as harmless and a valuable asset since they destroy field mice and young rabbits, and many of them are left to inhabit the haunts where they are common-ly located.

Occasionally a rattlesnake is found along the Cedar river. In the average of one to two a summer is found near West Liberty, by these are usually found after a spring freshet or flood, which occurs generally in June and July.

It is a generally accepted fact that these rattlesnakes are washed down from parts of the river farther north, where rock strata are common and in which these particular species hibernate during the winter.

We, the undersigned General Insurance Agencies in Muscatine, Iowa, hereby agree to close our offices on Wednesday afternoons during the summer months from June 3rd to Sept. 16th inclusive.

TEACHER EXAMS JUNE 24 TO 26
Regular July Tests Are Abolished by New State Law

The regular June examinations for uniform county teachers' certificates will be held June 24, 25 and 26, it was announced today by E. D. Bradley, county school superintendent. Second grade subjects will be written on the first two days, and first grade subjects on the final day.

These examinations are to be the last under the old law, and all of the teachers who have low grade certificates or who have a low percentage on certain subjects should write examinations, and some who have second grade certificates are expected to write their tests to prepare for first grade certificates.

In view of the surplus of teachers, school boards, according to Mr. Bradley, are prone to employ teachers having the best certificates. In most of the counties nothing below a second grade certificate is registered. The new certificate law goes into effect July 4, abolishing the regular July examinations and consolidating them with the August tests to be held in the first week of August.

Under the new law there will be but two examinations during the summer, whereas the old law provided for examinations during June, July and August. A special normal training examination will be held in connection with the June test, which was formerly held in July, under the old law.

Abundance of Snakes this Year Along Cedar River, Farmers Say

WEST LIBERTY, Ia.—(Special)—Snakes, especially the bull and the ringed snake, are to be found along the Cedar river in abundance this year, according to the farmers.

Contrary to the custom in former years, the farmers are not harming the snakes, for they are regarded by the majority as harmless and a valuable asset since they destroy field mice and young rabbits, and many of them are left to inhabit the haunts where they are common-ly located.

Occasionally a rattlesnake is found along the Cedar river. In the average of one to two a summer is found near West Liberty, by these are usually found after a spring freshet or flood, which occurs generally in June and July.

It is a generally accepted fact that these rattlesnakes are washed down from parts of the river farther north, where rock strata are common and in which these particular species hibernate during the winter.

We, the undersigned General Insurance Agencies in Muscatine, Iowa, hereby agree to close our offices on Wednesday afternoons during the summer months from June 3rd to Sept. 16th inclusive.

TEACHER EXAMS JUNE 24 TO 26
Regular July Tests Are Abolished by New State Law

The regular June examinations for uniform county teachers' certificates will be held June 24, 25 and 26, it was announced today by E. D. Bradley, county school superintendent. Second grade subjects will be written on the first two days, and first grade subjects on the final day.

These examinations are to be the last under the old law, and all of the teachers who have low grade certificates or who have a low percentage on certain subjects should write examinations, and some who have second grade certificates are expected to write their tests to prepare for first grade certificates.

In view of the surplus of teachers, school boards, according to Mr. Bradley, are prone to employ teachers having the best certificates. In most of the counties nothing below a second grade certificate is registered. The new certificate law goes into effect July 4, abolishing the regular July examinations and consolidating them with the August tests to be held in the first week of August.

Under the new law there will be but two examinations during the summer, whereas the old law provided for examinations during June, July and August. A special normal training examination will be held in connection with the June test, which was formerly held in July, under the old law.

Charm, Grace and Beauty

By KAY SWAFFORD
Fashion Authority for the Midwest
Free Press and Radio Station
K-TNT

A famous designer of women's clothes once said that after years of experience he had decided there were no really lovely women in the world; that every woman had at least one quality which, if properly brought out, could be enthroned, and all other qualities become hand-maidens to her command of charm.

But before we go on to discuss the relation of dress to charm, we should first distinguish between the pretty and beautiful woman. The pretty woman is one whose looks are entirely superficial; she goes frequently around the corner to use the vanity case (in these modern days she does not even take the trouble to go around the corner). The beautiful woman cultivates health, which is the fountain head of sweet disposition and spontaneity. She has the natural beauty of sparkling eyes, clear skin, and glowing hair.

All women wish to be beautiful and to possess that charm, yet most potent something which we call charm. But what is charm, and whence does it come? We all agree that it is an inner quality, and perhaps it may be said as a gracefulness from within which finds expression without, in a manner most pleasing to the world. Charm is the grace which compels a desired response from others, and because it is a within quality every woman may possess it, and every woman by cultivating charm may become beautiful. There is a subtle bond between charm of person and charm of dress.

It seems to me that dress should be much more than a mere covering or an ornament. It should be a picture painted by the wearer for the eyes of the world. It should be a picture painted by the wearer for the eyes of the world. It should be a picture painted by the wearer for the eyes of the world.

If it were possible to cull from each nation that which is most charming and distinctive in its dress, and fuse such knowledge in a text book of practical application, what a millennium in harmonious beauty we should attain. If one could select that quality of attractiveness which the English woman puts into her clothes, accompanied by the sincerity and decisiveness which we associate with her character, add to it the chic vivaciousness, the perfectness, the tail with which the "Parisienne" graces her clothes, what an alluring picture we should have. To this alluring portrait we might add the touch of the picturesque language of Spain, or the romantic charm of the Italian woman. Perhaps, after all, this strange and delightful composite may be but a vision of the American woman as she stands today, the foster mother of all nations, her face a blended portrait of them all.

The girls and women of today are fortunate in living in an age when clothes are more beautiful than they have ever been before in the history of our world, because the keynote of design in clothes is tending more and more toward individuality. Every style magazine is emphasizing this quality and sounding taps to extremes and ugliness. This stressing of individuality must inevitably lead to the ultimate of art in dress. The quality is recognized immediately as sincerity, which is the essence of charm.

Of course every one must remember that charm is not dependent on clothes, that it is a quality from within; but it can be expressed in clothes, just as inner life is expressed through the outward self. It manifests itself in one's ability to express her personality through her clothes. It is a genuine complicity when some one says, "That hat looks just like you," or, "I knew that coat was yours the moment I saw it." A gingham dress, the best of its kind, makes no pretense, just as it is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress.

It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress. It is just a gingham dress.

DOES JEALOUSY SHOW TRUE LOVE?

By Virginia Vane
Dear Virginia Vane: I am so much in love that I suppose I have like an idiot a great part of the time. But I don't seem to be able to help it. I am desperately in love with the girl I love, and I drive me crazy to see her with other fellows. This attitude of mine leads to constant quarrels and troubles. I feel that she should be bound to put up with my attitude, since it shows that I love her.

And it seems to me that you ought to be willing to overcome this attitude of yours, to prove that you really love the girl. At present you're thinking mostly of yourself, even though you imagine your jealousy arises from real love. You're jealous of the other fellows, first because you have an inferiority complex. You're afraid that they're more attractive than yourself. You can't bear to think that the girl friend is possibly going to be attracted by them, and so discover you to be an inferior being.

Secondly, it hurts your pride to see her affection on the ground of others. You prefer to believe that she wants to be with you, exclusively and always. You won't face the fact that any young attractive girl is bound to enjoy the admiration of several young men. You probably don't make any allowances for her in that direction at all. Now just start thinking about her happiness. Remind yourself all the time that you want her to be happy and that she is more important than anything else in the world. So long as she is only enjoying herself in a normal sort of way, why should you stand around glooming like a stern parent? You'll spoil your romance if you create ugly scenes out of nothing simply to appease your hurt vanity over some fancied slight. You can't possibly make any girl happy, if you let your jealousy be your strongest emotion. Try to get rid of the green-eyed monster with a spirit of real unselfish love and understanding. That will care you faster than anything else.

"The above article may help to explain the conduct of your letter who would seem to be more concerned with his own personal sense of pride than with his happiness. Perhaps if you talked to him along these lines and suggested that his wild jealousy was just a form of selfishness, he might be made inclined to reform.

MARTHA: If your sister has never shown any real love, or even normal family feeling for you, better not hang around her neck and ask favors. You put yourself under an obligation which will be unpleasant for both of you. You see, she's obviously cut herself off from the family with the definite intention of seeing none of you again. When she married, apparently, she wanted to be on her own, and she has chosen to do it by ignoring your existence. You can gain nothing now by attempting to win her affection on the ground of love after all, she is your sister, and ought to be interested in you.

If she helped you at all, she'd do it grudgingly, and surely you would rather stand on your own feet than accept ungracious help. You would never feel comfortable under these circumstances. If you have a sincere desire to be on more friendly terms with your sister, wait until you have nothing to ask of her, before approaching her.

George G. You will need legal advice in this matter. Your problem should not be difficult to solve from a legal point of view. (Copyright, 1931)

A girl never thinks a young man's heart is in the right place unless she possesses it.

For wasting those two valuable minutes staring into space in the court the night she had dated out of the room, she was made for her car.

Was that woman Florence Williams? She drove the Williams car. But she was a stranger to the woman of mystery, except that she had possession of the ribbon. How that woman could have known that she was in the room, she was unknown to me. I only knew instinctively that the solution lay with the little piece of ribbon.

Thornion didn't waste much time discussing these things. He was in a hurry to get to the room of Sam Helwig. "We can't get anywhere worrying about these things we can't solve," he said. "Whoever murdered Sam Helwig had something to do with the murder of Barry Croy. Maybe they left better clues in this murder than they did in the first."

Helwig was killed with a steel jacketed bullet. He was also shot in the same place as Barry. Of which may mean a whole lot or nothing at all. "Charley had a revolver that used steel jacketed bullets," he said. "Maybe we can find that revolver."

It's funny you didn't think of that before. "What good would it have done? Charley wasn't here."

For wasting those two valuable minutes staring into space in the court the night she had dated out of the room, she was made for her car.

The CLUE of the SCARLET RIBBON

SYNOPSIS: Because of her love for Barry Croy, a famous movie star, Charlie Linton is innocently enmeshed in one of Hollywood's most thrilling unsolved murders. The death of one closely connected with the case has unsealed her lips, and she tells the true version for the first time.

Thornion Trainbridge, a young newspaper man, is trying to clear my name and prove my innocence. Among the suspects are Jim Conkila, Barry's chauffeur; Florence Williams, movie star, who had been accused of having a list of names he wanted; her brother, a drug addict; Aunt Kate, who knows more than Barry himself; Pierre Caston, head of the dope ring to which Barry belonged; and a man named Helwig, who was a friend of Barry's. Although the police did not connect the murder of Sam Helwig with Barry's death, I recognized him as the man of mystery who had given me a box of scarlet ribbon he had stolen from Thornion to a mysterious woman during a clandestine meeting in our garden.

By E. V. BURKHOLDER

WHAT Aunt Kate found I never learned. She didn't remain in her room long. It could not have been more than five minutes until I heard her door open. She came down the stairs with her hat on and walked out of the house. I watched her as she turned to the right, which would take her to the yard, and then ran out in the yard myself, and started to look around. I don't know what I hoped to find. It was a fool act on my part.

Thornion entered the house while I was still out in the court, staring like a fool at the ground where I had been looking for something. "Looking for something?" he called out from the house. His voice frightened me. I jumped about a foot. My nerves were bad.

"How did you get in the house?" I demanded, a little put out. "No trouble at all. The door was open."

"Sure, wide open. Giving the house an airing?" "No, but it needs it. Aunt Kate must have left the door open in her excitement to get out of the house."

"Well, tell me what's happened now?" "He sat down on a bench and I took a seat beside him. 'How sure are you that the woman who shot that ribbon wasn't your Aunt Kate?'"

"Absolutely. I would have known her voice. I would have recognized her back as she got into the car."

"You didn't recognize the car as being that Williams' yet you had seen it a hundred times?" "I wasn't looking at the car. I was looking at the woman."

"But he came back. The police knew it, so did you."

"They are convinced that Barry was killed by the dope ring. They know he was working with them."

"That didn't give the dope ring the exclusive right to kill him."

"Quite true, but the police cannot be accused of overwork."

"Why don't you look for the gun now?" "I've been looking for it for three weeks."

"You've been looking for it?" "Sure, what do you think I've been doing?"

"I didn't know."

"Well, I have been looking for the gun. Several other people have looked for it. Charley did good work in hiding it."

"You can do much without the gun."

"Yes, yes, we can. The police have quit bothering the landlady where Helwig lived. I'm going to ask her a few questions. Want to come along?"

"I suppose so. There is nothing else to do."

The landlady of the rooming house proved to be a talkative and eccentric character. She received us with a pretense of courtesy that was almost disgusting. We sat in her dining room, which was on the first floor of the house.

The old chair I sat in cracked and quivered under my slight weight. The landlady, whose name was Mrs. Sophie Collins, sat in an old rocking chair and rocked slowly back and forth.

"Mr. Helwig was a fine man," she said in the mournful tone of one who is speaking of the departed. "He paid his room rent promptly, but he was a strange creature. He was not a man of the day and was out at night. Michael, my husband, said there was something funny about the man."

Bridge-Auction and Contract

By the Authority
MILTON C. WORK

THE LESSER EVIL
With the above hand at Auction South would obtain an uncontested one No Trump contract. At Contract, South's 2-count hand, with every suit stopped, warranted an original declaration of three No Trumps, and neither adversary had a double or a bid.

West led the Five of Spades. East played the Ten, and South won the trick with the Queen. A hold-up here would have meant the loss of the Queen and but a single stopper in Spades. Declarer counted on sure tricks, plus additional possibilities in Diamonds and Clubs. Since dummy could not be put in the lead to finesse either Clubs or Diamonds, Declarer decided to establish Diamonds—his longest and strongest suit. He played the Ace, then the Queen. East played his King on the Queen since he could not keep Declarer from winning at least one Diamond trick in dummy.

East led a Spade, and South correctly held up his Ace until the third round. Declarer now ran the remaining Diamonds, winning the last round in dummy. The Queen of Clubs was led and covered by the King. All Declarer could win now was the Ace and Jack of Clubs and the Ace of Hearts. East and West won altogether one trick in Diamonds, one in Clubs, two in Spades and one in Hearts—making the contract one trick. Could Declarer have made more than he did?

The Correct Play
South is forced to give up one finesse in order to set up an entry in dummy's hand; he must have selected the less valuable. Even if the Club finesse works, a trick must be lost in that suit. If the Diamond finesse succeeds, however, that suit is solid. Declarer should lead a small Club from his own hand. After the Spades are established, another small Club puts dummy in the lead. The Jack of Diamonds, and the Ten played from Declarer's hand if East plays low. In this way Declarer's Seven King, All played under dummy's Nine, he takes. Declarer wins four Nine, and the necessary third finesse can be taken. Declarer wins four Diamonds, one in Clubs, one in Spades, two in Clubs, one in Hearts—making the contract one trick. As We See It

Newspaper Gag Law Invalid.

Not possessing extensive legal knowledge possibly we are "all wet" in our opinions concerning the Minnesota "newspaper gag" law as its principles could be construed as applying to radio stations, but we fail to see any distinction.

The United States Supreme Court, in a 5 to 4 decision, has just declared the Minnesota law unconstitutional. The law, passed in 1925, provided for the suppression of any publication held to be "malicious, scandalous or defamatory." The Saturday Press, a Minneapolis weekly, published in that year a series of articles on vice conditions in which it assailed city officials. The Press was permanently enjoined from publication by a state court and the state supreme court upheld the decision. Through the efforts of the Chicago Tribune, which took up the defense of the Minneapolis paper as a matter of principle, the case was appealed to the United States Supreme Court which Monday declared the law unconstitutional because it was an infringement of the liberty of the press guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment. Chief Justice Hughes, who delivered the majority opinion, said that the law was, in effect, a censorship, and that redress from untrue stories and restraint was found in the libel laws. He asserted further that the Minnesota law operated not only to suppress the offending newspaper but to put the publisher under an effective censorship. The effect of the law, the Chief Justice continued, was to put a newspaper out of business.

"This is the essence of censorship," Justice Hughes concluded.

So much for that in connection with newspapers.

And now we rise to ask why the same fundamental principle does not apply in relation to radio stations? What is denying a radio station the right to operate if not censorship? In the one case a newspaper, because it was used as a medium to print something that did not meet the approval of a certain clique, was suppressed. In another case because it was a medium of broadcasting something that did not meet the approval of another certain clique (the Brinkley station in Kansas, for instance) a radio station was suppressed. When you come down to fundamentals wherein lies the difference? Is not the one just as much the "essence of censorship," as Chief Justice Hughes says, as the other? Chief Justice Hughes also says that redress from untrue stories and restraint is found in the libel laws. Why is not this equally true of radio stations? Why should not action be taken against those responsible for making statements that may cause offense rather than suppressing the medium of expression?

As stated in this column some time ago in discussing this same subject, the Brinkley case was not carried to the United States Supreme Court. In the event the Federal Radio Commission decides against K-TNT it is probable that an appeal eventually will be taken to the country's highest tribunal. The final decision will rest with them.

Highway Rules.

Two or three recent automobile accidents in the vicinity of Muscatine have given rise to the question as to the right-of-way rules at intersections of country roads. In cities and along our main highways important streets and roads with heavy traffic are marked, either by signal lights or stop signs, but at the intersections of less frequented roads each autoist is inclined to be a law unto himself.

Unless the intersection is designated by a traffic marker it is always well to remember that custom throughout the nation gives the car approaching from the right the right-of-way.

For instance: If you approach an unmarked intersection from the east, traveling west, and you see a car approaching from the south on the other road, you, as the driver traveling west (and at the right of the northbound car) would have the right-of-way. But if you were going east the car from the south would have the right-of-way as it would be approaching from your right. This is one of the first rules of the road and many accidents would be avoided if it were more generally heeded. However, if there is any doubt, stopping your car until you are certain what the other fellow is going to do is the only safe way.

Governors and Taxes.

The governors of twenty-two states are meeting in French Lick, Ind., this week to endeavor to find out what is wrong with state government. That there is plenty wrong has been evident for some time but just what to do about it nobody seems to know.

Taxation was the first subject under discussion. Governor William M. Bruckner of Michigan proved that he was a strong advocate of "home rule," the county plan of taxation, without so much state interference. Governor Harry H. Woodring of Kansas urged a system by which the state legislature would fix a maximum for levies beyond which no local government could go. He contended this system would force each unit to live within its means.

Thus we have the two extremes, one allowing the state to set the limit and the other leaving it up to the local units. If qualified men could be obtained for public office, men who believe economy should be the watchword, the local unit plan seems more likely to obtain the better results. The more government is centralized the better it can be carried out. People are more inclined to watch city and county expenses than they are state and national. With the state as a unit the expense is pro-rated among the counties which must pay, whether they receive any direct benefits or not. County government, on the other hand, applies entirely to local problems, permitting a more business-like administration.

Iowa Building Gains.

As we read reports of business conditions throughout the country we gain the impression that by comparison with many other sections Iowa is more than holding its own. While we undoubtedly have our share of jobless men this state seems to be above the average for the country in its employment ratio.

One of the factors which is having its effect in providing additional work is the gain in building construction. An official announcement from Des Moines says that in April 1,070 building permits were issued as compared to 766 in March, an increase of 304. The value of the permits was slightly over two million dollars or nearly twice as great as the March valuation. That means more jobs and the trend should increase as the building season gets under way.

Our Platform for the People Is:

1. Low taxation.
2. Fewer State Commissions.
3. Universal school books.
4. Lower freight rates.
5. Return of river transportation.
6. A cleanup of some state institutions.
7. More efficiency in public offices.

Good Health Club

"SALVAGING HEALTH"

The newer philosophy of disease, and its ideas, relating to the real basic cause of ill-health, has been worked out until it is beyond the guesswork or experimental stage.

Let us hope the new day for simpler and more natural methods of treating, or rather, teaching people to keep healthy, will soon become a universal factor of life.

In spite of all the technical names for the dozens of different diseases the fact remains that "dirt" and "drainage" constitutes the rational road to health; and that there is a basic, universal cause of disease which can be termed "Toxemia."

A sick body is "toxic" and whether the particular symptoms are called "rheumatism," because the liver and gall-bladder are congested and the bile is forced out in the circulation, making the skin appear a dirty yellow; or whether the symptoms indicate mucus-colic because we find constipation, headache, specks before the eyes, dizzy spells, the passing of catarrhal mucus, rectal troubles and hemorrhoids; the body is "toxic." The body is full of poison because it has been congested and clogged with refuse from suppressed, fermented, and putrefied food, and, as a result, "drainage" has been hindered, and slowed down, and possibly, stopped entirely in local area of the body.

"Drainage" as the term is used here covers any and all of the eliminative processes of the human body whether it be the lungs, the intestinal tract, the urinary system, or the skin; these various avenues of elimination should normally drain the body every day of solids and liquids which the system has no further use for.

When we find out more, and know more, about these new simple truths which conscientious workers are proving we will find that most of the ailments are unnecessary. We who are well should know "why" we are not sick instead of the sick wondering why they are not well. To say that our long life and general good health is the result of healthy long-lived ancestors is not proving that we have any dependable knowledge to rely upon.

We cannot depend upon the virtue of health of someone who has passed on. It is pleasant to know that we come of good clean parentage but the healthiest person may become ill if they live indifferently with a feeling of despondency upon such knowledge alone. The modern ways of living can offset such a heritage and it is necessary that we, ourselves, should know why we are well in order that we may remain intelligently well.

"Man know thyself" and learning to live "moderately" is some time in the future, but it is surely on the horizon of the new era of health knowledge and sufficiently clear for some to gain inkings of the truth. Instead of living in misery and dreading the years ahead, let us learn to stay well, and to enjoy old age.

The various illnesses as they are usually looked at today appear as so many separate sicknesses and diseases when in reality they are a complex mass of "symptoms" of a toxic, poisoned-filled body. The symptoms may be rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis or what not; it doesn't alter the fact that if the tissues and the blood stream were clean these symptoms and pains would not exist. There cannot be anything without a cause and when a person is sick the body is congested and the blood stream is carrying poisons instead of food to the various parts and organs; regardless of what name we tag on to the symptoms. We can write the word "rare" on a tag, and tie it to a goat's tail, but that doesn't change the fact that the goat doesn't still smell like a goat. So, whether you call a pain by this or that name, the cause is still the same.

It is not true that the needed knowledge of how to prolong life and be efficient, both physically and mentally, is too technical for average people to understand. Words and phrases, both in English and in Latin, have been carried and thrown at the public in such a clever way as to gain publicity for this or that, and the people, who you know, are the children of Old Mother West Wind, brought the sound of Sammy Jay's voice from the Old Orchard. It was very clear that Sammy was much excited about something. Reddy stopped hunting Danny and picked up his sharp ears. Whenever Sammy was screaming like that something interesting was usually going on. It was still early in the morning and Reddy felt that it would be quite safe to go up there and see what was going on.

He listened for a few minutes and turned and trotted swiftly in the direction of the Old Orchard, but not directly toward the place where Sammy was screaming so. Oh, my, no! That isn't Reddy's way. He is too sharp and clever and sly to be direct in anything. He first makes sure that he is in a clear and that he is not likely to get into trouble. So, instead of heading straight for where Sammy was screaming he went in a roundabout way so as to enter the Old Orchard from the side nearest the Green Forest and creep up behind the old stone wall to a point where he could see what was going on with the least possible danger of being seen himself.

When he reached the old stone wall he crept along behind it swiftly but softly, crouching very low with his ears cocked forward so he could sniff the air for any tell-tale scent and his eager eyes watched for Sammy's blue coat in a tree on the very edge of the Old Orchard.

Instantly Reddy stopped and flattered himself down behind the stone wall to watch. He saw right away that Sammy was quarrelling with someone on the other side of the wall and that he was so busy calling him usual sharp watch. Very carefully Reddy crawled along to a place where the stone wall was low and then raised his head just enough to peek over it. There right in the open sat Peter Rabbit making faces at Sammy Jay.

Reddy almost chuckled aloud. "This is the time I'll catch Peter Rabbit," he muttered. "If I can get between him and the old stone wall he will have to run down on the Green Meadows. He will probably start for the Old Briar Patch, and if I can't catch him before he gets there I don't deserve ever to catch him. He will make a great deal better breakfast than Danny Meadow Mouse would, and I'll get Danny some other day." Isn't it I have Sammy Jay to thank for anything, but this time I certainly have. Peter Rabbit has laughed at me and made fun of me a great many times, but now it is my turn to laugh. There is a place just ahead where I can jump over the old wall and be within two jumps of Peter before he knows I am anywhere about."

Reddy ducked down again and swiftly crept to the place where he would jump over the old wall and surprise Peter Rabbit. Slowly and carefully he raised his head to peep over the wall. Peter was there right in front of him. Reddy prepared to jump over the wall. It certainly looked as if Peter Rabbit was in a very bad fix.

Just Kiddies

REDDY FOX DISCOVERS PETER

Reddy Fox was hunting for Danny Meadow Mouse down on the Green Meadows. He did that every day, or almost every day. Danny was quite used to it. He knew about Reddy and just how to fool him. Sometimes Reddy gave him great frights, but on the whole he rather enjoyed the excitement of these daily hunts. It made him feel good clear to the tip of his little short tail to see Reddy finally give up and go off disappointed. You see, there is always a lot of pleasure in feeling that you are smarter than some else, especially some one who has the name of being very smart indeed. And so every time Reddy was hunting for him Danny would swell out his chest and boast a little to Nanny Meadow Mouse.

"No one ever calls me smart," he would say, "but there goes one of the smartest hunters on the Green Meadows or in the Green Forest and with all his smartness he can't catch me. I think I am a little bit smart myself."

You really can't blame him for feeling that way, can you? On this particular morning Reddy had twice almost caught Danny and Danny was getting a little worried about the sneaky little fox. As you know, are the children of Old Mother West Wind, brought the sound of Sammy Jay's voice from the Old Orchard. It was very clear that Sammy was much excited about something. Reddy stopped hunting Danny and picked up his sharp ears. Whenever Sammy was screaming like that something interesting was usually going on. People's Pulpit

People's Pulpit—

I see by your Sunday, May 31, issue that you are putting on a contest drive for subscriptions which is a very nice thing. But why not give us more news?

I don't remember seeing in any of your papers about the unemployed having hunger marches to the state capitols of the different states. (Norman Baker has mentioned these hunger marches two or three times in his column—Ed.). There is to be one in the state of Illinois and the hunger marchers start from Chicago, Rockford, Eldorado, East St. Louis and Moline. The hunger marchers will meet in Springfield on the 14th and hold a meeting and put up their demands to the state legislature. Their demands will be for old age and unemployment pensions and immediate relief for the unemployed.

They already have had hunger marches in other states and there will be one when the state legislature sits again in Iowa. The people will start out at various points to meet at the state capital. There are over 600,000 unemployed in the state of Illinois and Iowa compares about the same according to population. So don't be like the other capitalistic papers that make no mention of these things at all. The people in this vicinity and throughout the whole country are not put wise to any of these things only through a few labor papers.

Why don't you follow up the Kentucky coal miners' war? There are people who don't know a civil war going on in the United States down in Kentucky.

As far as times getting better it is out of the question. This winter going to be harder than the last, unless the Wall Street bunch will reform and there are no indications that way yet.

G. J. Peck, Davenport, Ia.

People's Pulpit— I want to ask the people of Muscatine county a few questions. Why don't you wake up and realize what it means to your city to have a man like Norman Baker who stands ready at all times to fight your battles? Can't you realize what the Baker hospital and K-TNT mean to your community? Can't you realize what a tuberculosis sanatorium would mean to your community? Why not get behind them all one hundred per cent, and help put some of your unemployed to work? If you lived in other cities with no radio station for you and a chain radio station bringing you programs you can get most anywhere over your dial, you would then realize what it all means. So get behind them and help while the helping is good.

Manhattan Days and Nights By Walter Trambull

The formal opening of the Empire State building, President Hoover pressing a telegraph key; Al Smith's grandchildren pulling ribbons; the former governor unloading doors; street-filling throngs of spectators; held back by police. An impressive ceremony, but to many of us anti-climax. For months, from our windows, we watched that structure grow. First the skeleton of steel, 60,000 tons of it. Then the elevators; 10,000 tons of brass; 200,000 cubic feet of limestone and granite; endless strips of glass; chrome-nickel; aluminum. These were the day the steelworkers flew their flag; the day the last of the columns and girders grew their outer covering. Then came the tower. When I left for the south, it resembled something a child had fashioned from wire. When I returned, it looked like a candle set on a highway. It certainly appeared to be completed then, but I suppose there were a few extra touches to be put on its seven miles of elevator shafts and that they had to clean the 6,400 windows. Or perhaps there was a hitch in the fifty-one miles of plumbing. That's the most plumbing there is in all the castles in Europe.

It seems to me that when they did get around to the formal opening little originality was displayed. They just turned on the lights, opened the door and went in. My idea of a proper christening for that building would have been to have either Frank Hawks or the Los Angeles fly over and break a bottle of champagne cider on the morning mast. Then the 200 invited guests could have been dropped on the roof in parachutes. One reason I thought of that scheme is because I was not an invited guest. The reporters would, as usual, have been taken in on the ground floor.

The name of this building seems eminently suitable. It is a small empire, with space for 35,000 tenants. At a conservative estimate, with all offices rented, that would mean with tenants, employees and visitors, 100,000 persons going in and out of that building every week day. There are sixteen of these United States which have no city with that many inhabitants. Can you imagine a giant, leaning on his elbow, looking down at the Empire State building. He would think it was a pretty busy ant-hill.

Think of the number of letters, which will be posted through the 286 mail chute openings; letters on every subject; letters to every city and country. Think of the number which will be called under New York's complicated system of dial-

ing. I shudder to think of the increase in that direction. Already numerous strangers call me up each day under the impression that I am a department store, a theater, an undertaking establishment or a radio bureau. I know a man who has evolved a system. When a voice on his telephone inquires for some one of whom he has never heard, he politely requests the caller to get the other end to call the right number and then furnishes the number of the city jail.

I wonder how many countless thousands will go to the observatory floor of the Empire State, from which they can see the extent of Manhattan island and far beyond the rivers that look like ribbons and the squares of business and apartment houses, most of which look as if they were constructed of turned, it looked like a candle set on a highway. It certainly appeared to be completed then, but I suppose there were a few extra touches to be put on its seven miles of elevator shafts and that they had to clean the 6,400 windows. Or perhaps there was a hitch in the fifty-one miles of plumbing. That's the most plumbing there is in all the castles in Europe.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

IN CONFERENCE When, lazily, the sun has set Though still the skies are blue, And when the leaves and lawn are wet.

With heads of evening dew While drowsily the robins sing And flocks of sooty crows Go flapping by on weary wing. To seek their night's repose, When chickens perch for rest and ease.

Upon the barnyard fence, The crackles gather in the trees To hold a conference. I know not what they talk about With so much eager zest; Each conferee speaks loudly out And tries to drown the rest.

From elm and maple trees nearby, From forests far away, As soon as evening comes, they fly To have their earnest say. But when shines clearly overhead The earliest evening star.

Their wings the grave debaters spread; They scatter wide and far. I know not what they talk about That interests them so, But they, beyond the slightest doubt,

Are certain that they know, And they, like men, year after year Delight to gather 'round Exchanging endless words, and hear The way their voices sound.

JULIUS CAESAR WAS NEVER EMPEROR OF ROME

A $5,000,000 COSTUME Worn by Helen Polka WAS MADE FROM FIVE HUNDRED $10,000 BILLS...

DRINKING WATER ON THE ISLE OF FERRO WAS ONCE FURNISHED BY A TREE..

It is possible that Julius Caesar would have been emperor if he hadn't met his death at the hands of Brutus and the conspirators. The $5,000,000 dancing costume "praeefectus morum" bestowed upon himself the title of emperor. "Et Tu Brute." Suetonius says that Caesar drew a deep sigh, but did not utter a word.

On the small island of Ferro, which forms part of the Spanish archipelago of the Canary Islands, drinking water is scarce, but there is a sulphurous spring, which has a temperature of 102 degrees F. Water was once supplied by the famous and almost sacred Til tree, which distilled water in great quantities from its leaves. This tree no longer exists.

It is possible that Julius Caesar would have been emperor if he hadn't met his death at the hands of Brutus and the conspirators. The $5,000,000 dancing costume "praeefectus morum" bestowed upon himself the title of emperor. "Et Tu Brute." Suetonius says that Caesar drew a deep sigh, but did not utter a word.

CAMERONIAN IS WINNER OF 151st ENGLISH DERBY

ORPEN SECOND WITH SANDWICH RIGHT BEHIND

Five Americans Hold Tickets That Win Them $450,000

BY CHARLES A. SMITH
The victory of Cameronian dropped a fortune of $150,000 in the lap of Joseph Kennedy, 33-year-old East Indian negro, who won $150,000 on 12 tickets in the Irish hospital sweepstakes.

He had come to America to win a fortune. In the sweepstakes he had played to win all or lose. He had refused $50,000 for his ticket on Cameronian and that horse won the Epsom Downs derby.

On the island of Jamaica, his birthplace, Kennedy dreamed of America and a fortune. Three years ago he bade goodbye to his wife and three children.

"I'm going to the states to make a fortune and I'll be back for you," he told Mrs. Kennedy.

"This is my idea of heaven come true," said Kennedy when he learned that Cameronian had won the derby. "The first thing I'll do is bring my wife and children to America—the land of my dreams come true."

Kennedy was overjoyed but remained calm when he heard the news while at work at Morgan Memorial. For a while, at least he will continue at work at the big south end mission.

Except for the future happiness of his wife and children, Kennedy said he was "at sea" as to what he would do with his big winning.

Other Americans win. George Hill of Norway, Maine, and Thomas O'Connor of 2728 DeCatur avenue, New York city, won $100,000 each on Orpen. Each held one of the nineteen tickets on this horse in the great Irish sweepstakes.

William Coyle of 1230 Keith building, Cincinnati, and S. L. Horowitz of 2177 Walton avenue, the Bronx, New York, each held tickets on Sandwich, and as a result profit to the tune of $50,000 apiece.

Cameronian, ridden by Fred Fox, had been favored for weeks to win the classic, but high hopes were held out for the two American-owned entries, Marshall Field's Jacopo and William Woodward's Andrew, neither, however, finished fourth.

Goyascas, the highly-touted French entry of M. M. Bouscass, finished fourth.

All Classes Represented. Upwards of three-quarters of a million souls, every class of English life from royalty and nobles to the way down the social scale to Gypsies and humble cockney costers witnessed the great race, which was run under cloudy skies.

In the royal box were King George and Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales and other members of the royal family, out for a good time just as much as any one of their subjects. For derby day, a national holiday, had been declared, and the streets were thronged with people.

It was a black day for the "bookies" and one that few of them would like to repeat. Cameronian, winner of the 2,000 Guineas classic at Newmarket a few weeks ago, carried most of the money and many long odds bets from the hoarse throats of the bookmakers around the course as the beautiful thoroughbred swept down the course in front of the field.

Derby races have a way of upsetting calculations and expectations, and many a highly touted favorite has gone into the classic only to find itself outclassed and beaten by some rank outsider.

This, however, was an expectation in every sense of the word. All three placing horses had been conceded a good chance of victory, and the eastern in which they had been held was shown by the prices they paid. Cameronian paid 7 to 2, Orpen 9 to 2, and Sandwich 10 to 1.

Cameronian left no doubt as to his superiority over the blue-blooded French, American and English turf aristocrats that got away from the barriers at 3.08 p. m. (10:08 a. m. eastern standard time).

Ridden with a masterly touch, Cameronian finished three-quarters of a length in front of Orpen. The same distance separated Orpen from Sandwich.

Race Starts Perfect. The field got away to a perfect start. Cameronian took the lead almost the moment the barrier was dropped, but was soon displaced by Gallini. The latter horse led as far as Tattenham corner, but at that point Cameronian and Orpen surged into the lead.

These two horses fought a ding-dong battle until the last two furlongs, during which Fox gradually pushed his mount ahead to score a clean-cut victory as the finish line was passed.

Cameronian's time was 2 minutes, 36 and 3-5ths seconds, unusually fast considering the condition of the track. This left the record of 2 minutes, 34 and 2-5ths seconds set several years ago by Call Boy still intact.

Dream Comes True For Boston Negro Who Wins $150,000

BOSTON—(INS)—"My dream has come true."

GRIMES HURLS CARDS TO WIN OVER NEW YORK

St. Louis Cops the First Game of Important Series, 4 to 3

By COPELAND C. BURG
INS Sports Writer

NEW YORK—(INS)—When he takes the diamond ball in his hand there's a cocksure shift of the shoulders, a hateful smirk in the corner of his mouth and a devilish, bragging slant to the eye, which seems to say:

"Watch me make a bum out of everybody."

That's Burleigh Grimes, St. Louis Cardinal hurler, a man the average baseball fan just loves to hate.

But today dislike and turned to admiration.

Grimes Beats Giants. For this hard man's resolute, fighting manner of playing ball had turned back the New York Giants, 4 to 3, in the first game of a series in which the easterners challenged the right of the Cardinals to lead the National league. Grimes outpitched the Giant ace, Freddie Fitzsimmons, hit a single that scored the winning run in the eighth inning and made the final out of the game.

Lindstrom sent a roller to the Card hurler in the last play and Grimes hurried in, and raced over to first with it for the last out.

And even a Grimes can be sorry! When one of his twisters hit Fitzsimmons on the New York's pitching arm in the third, Burleigh ran over and expressed his regret to Fitz and with his arm on his shoulder escorted him to first base.

Miller's Homer Wins. Bing Miller hit a homer with one man on in the sixth and helped Rube Walberg win his eighth game, his seventh in a row, as the champion Athletics beat the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 3. The Sox were scoreless after the initial inning.

A rally in the ninth, which was climaxed by a rousing threebagger off Walberg's bat, triumphed, 7 to 6, for the Robins of Brooklyn over the Chicago Cubs. Jackie May was hit for three runs in the final frame. The win nudged the Robins into a tie with Boston for fourth place.

Vernon Gomez, the tiny Californian, lowered away the St. Louis Browns, 2 to 1, for the New York Yankees.

Indians Take Another. Cleveland won its eighth straight game. The Indians scored eight runs in the sixth inning against Boston and finally took it, 12 to 11. Morgan drove in four of Cleveland's tallies.

Eddie Brandt, the surprise package of the Boston Braves, met his first defeat, when Pittsburgh rapped him for 11 safeties and beat him, 4 to 3.

Two homers by Chuck Klein and effective hurling by Jumbo Jim Elliott accounted for the Phillies' 6 to 2 mopping-up of the Cincy Reds.

Carl Fischer, Washington rookie hurler, started an altitude record in the ninth but managed to fly out Akers, snapping a Detroit rally to capture the game for the Senators, 9 to 3.

FISH IN IOWA ARE PROTECTED BY DEPARTMENT

Nurse Baby Pike and Bass in 93 Lakes Over State

By FRANK CRANE
DES MOINES—(INS)—The work of nursing baby pike and bass until they are able to protect themselves against their natural enemies is the most valuable work the Iowa fish and game department has done in the 18 years of its existence. W. E. Albert, state game warden, Wednesday told International News Service.

Albert pointed out that the department, which by state law is the general assembly, was placed in the hands of a commission of five Iowa professional and business men, under its supervision 93 stocked lakes, and another 100, which are also stocked regularly with game fish, as well as 32 game refuges.

Artificial propagation of fish, the veteran game warden stated, hatcheries is a greater percentage of eggs and the nursing ponds, in which the pike and bass are allowed to attain a length of eight or ten inches before they are turned into the open waters of the state, enable ten times the number of fish which would attain maturity under natural circumstances to become game fish.

Department Supports Self. Albert emphasized the fact that the fish and game department is entirely self supporting, receiving no appropriation from the state. More than that, he declared, the department during the last biennium turned $65,000 into the school fund. Revenue is gained from hunting, fishing and trapping licenses, sale of rough fish removed under contract from state waters, and from miscellaneous office receipts.

During the year ending June 30, 1930, the department received $257,013.39, while in the same period only $307,183.94 was required for the department's work. During the year ending June 30, 1929, $247,933 was received, while the salary of $120,000 annually, today the salary of that officer has been increased to $3,300.

April 17, 1931, under provision of the last law, a commission of five men was placed in charge of the work. Dr. W. C. Boone of Ottumwa, is chairman of the commission. Other members are Arthur E. Rapp, of Council Bluffs, secretary; Dr. J. F. Walters, of McGregor; Dennis H. Goeters, of Amana, and J. N. Darling, of Des Moines.

Outstanding work has been done with pheasants, according to Albert's last report. During the 1929-30 period, 7,200 ringneck pheasants were distributed in the state, together with 19,052 pheasant eggs. These were sent out with the understanding that all birds be liberated in covers adapted to them and given the best possible protection.

Warden 12 Years. Albert, who has been in that work for twenty years or more, became state warden two years ago, at which time the department was described as being figuratively "in receivership." The first state game warden worked for a salary of $1,200 annually, today the salary of that officer has been increased to $3,300.

These were sent out with the understanding that all birds be liberated in covers adapted to them and given the best possible protection.

Warden 12 Years. Albert, who has been in that work for twenty years or more, became state warden two years ago, at which time the department was described as being figuratively "in receivership." The first state game warden worked for a salary of $1,200 annually, today the salary of that officer has been increased to $3,300.

April 17, 1931, under provision of the last law, a commission of five men was placed in charge of the work. Dr. W. C. Boone of Ottumwa, is chairman of the commission. Other members are Arthur E. Rapp, of Council Bluffs, secretary; Dr. J. F. Walters, of McGregor; Dennis H. Goeters, of Amana, and J. N. Darling, of Des Moines.

Outstanding work has been done with pheasants, according to Albert's last report. During the 1929-30 period, 7,200 ringneck pheasants were distributed in the state, together with 19,052 pheasant eggs. These were sent out with the understanding that all birds be liberated in covers adapted to them and given the best possible protection.

Complete Market Reports

GRAIN VALUES CRAWL LOWER IN CHICAGO PIT

Farm Board Action Held to Blame For Drive

CHICAGO (INS)—The drastic break in June wheat in the northwestern markets with Minneapolis off 13½¢ caused a sharp break in wheat futures here today. All futures scored new lows for the season.

June wheat in the Chicago market dropped off 5½¢ a bushel early when it touched 65½¢ against the previous finish of 7¼¢, but braced up somewhat near the close in sympathy with outside market and finished at 66½¢.

At the close June wheat was 5½¢ off while other futures dropped ½¢ to 2½¢. December corn scored a new low for the season when it touched 46½¢ a bushel. But finished at 46½¢. The general corn market was ½¢ higher to ½¢ lower at the finish. Oats were ¼¢ to ½¢ lower and rye ½¢ up to ½¢ down.

The sharp break in wheat prices was chiefly attributed to the withdrawal of the farm board from the cash markets today. Whether the board will stay out of the market definitely was not determined.

Wheat futures were easy during the forenoon with fairly heavy selling on reports of unsettled weather in Canada and weakness in Liverpool. Prices were off about 1½¢ early. On the setback commission house buying influenced a slight rally, but free offerings met the upturn. Trade was nervous.

June wheat in the Minneapolis market dropped off as much as 6½¢ at the opening, indicating a withdrawal of farm board support. The inactive option here was about a bushel lower in sympathy with Minneapolis.

Fairly general rains were noted over a large part of the spring wheat area in western Canada, precipitation was light in some sections.

Oats and rye were steady with trade featureless.

Estimated carlot receipts were: Wheat 55, corn 76 and oats 17.
